

How will your college or post-secondary education allow you to be of service to others or give to others?

Hook statement

Life is full of opportunities but sometimes it can be hard to navigate through it and find a purpose especially when other people seem to know what they are doing.

College or post-secondary education is an important part of a person's life. It educates, grooms, and prepares a person for his future and his professional life.

It also enables the person to give back to society and be of service to others. Colleges prepare a student to learn and excel in their chosen fields, they equip a person with the knowledge and practical skills that can be applied after they complete their education. Such as people who go to medical colleges practice medicine after their education to help people. Similarly, people pursue different degrees such as engineering, management, arts, etc. and they move on and apply this education in their respective careers and contribute to the economy and stability of the country.

Ever since I was a child I have been interested in literature, it has introduced me to different worlds and eras. This is why I decided to choose literature in college. I want to go into teaching in the future and this subject allows me to have a career doing what I love. It will help me impart my knowledge to other people and revive the dying love for literature in this digital age where children today only know about Netflix and HBO Max or spend most of their time scrolling on social media. My education will also allow me to enter the world of teaching and prepare my students before they step into their practical lives. It will provide them with the opportunity to broaden their horizons and change their perspectives. I will be able to guide them on their future academic as well as personal choice and encourage them to have the drive and initiative to expand their knowledge and help them be the best versions of themselves. Education and knowledge are the basis of all things that can be accomplished in life and my college degree will help me accomplish things as well as any people I come in contact with in the future.

Personal background and interests

Professional goals and aspirations

There are many books in the literature that mirror society so my education allows me to better understand the world I live in, “In an era of modern media, such as television and movies, people are misled into thinking that every question or problem has its quick corrections or solutions. However, the literature confirms the real complexity of the human conflict.” It helps me understand humanity so I can better understand other people and have more empathy. There is always a need for good teachers in society as they are responsible for shaping individuals and my college education will enable me to fill this responsibility.

Restating personal interests to show why they deserve the scholarship